iPhone image by sanyal from Fotolia.com One of the calling features offered by AT&T is call blocking. This feature allows you to block your number from displaying on someone else's caller ID when dialing out, block incoming calls from specific numbers or block calls from others who hide their numbers from your caller ID. Press *67 on your phone and listen for a dial tone. Dial the number you are calling. Repeat this process for each call that you make, as this method will block your number for one call only. Press *60 on your phone and listen carefully to the announcement. It will tell you whether your service is on or off. Press 3 to turn this service on (or off), then press 1 to hear the numbers that are on your blocked list, if any. Press #01# to add the last number that called you to the list. Press # to add a new number to your list. The voice instructions will then tell you to enter the area code and number, and then press #. Press 0 to hear all of the voice instructions again. Deactivate selective number rejection by following Steps 1 and 2. Press *77 on your phone and listen for a dial tone. Once you hear the second dial tone, you have activated call blocking of restricted numbers. Dial 1177 if you have a rotary phone to block callers with caller ID-blocked numbers. Deactivate this feature by dialing *87 or 1187. One of the most annoying things about carrying a phone in your pocket everywhere is unwanted phone calls. Whether they're spam calls or someone you don't want to talk to anymore, we'll show you how to block them on Android. Android devices all vary a bit, so the methods in this guide won't work for everyone. We'll be demonstrating with a Samsung Galaxy phone and a Google Pixel handset. If you don't have one of these, you can try to loosely follow along. RELATED: How to Avoid Spam Robocalls with "Verified Calls" on Android Block Calls on a Samsung Galaxy Phone Open the default phone app that came pre-installed on your Samsung phone. Make sure that you're on the "Recents" tab and tap the three-dot menu icon in the top-right corner. Select "Settings" from the drop-down menu. At the top, tap "Block Numbers." Here, you can toggle a switch to automatically "Block Unknown Callers." Also, you can manually add phone numbers to block or select from your "Recents" and "Contacts." When entering a number manually, tap the + button to add it. Selecting from "Recents" or "Contacts" will immediately add them to the list, which can be seen on this screen as well. That's all there is to it! You can simply tap the red minus icon to stop blocking a number. Block Calls on a Google Pixel Phone Google Pixel phones come pre-installed with the "Phone by Google" app. This app can be installed on some non-Pixel devices, but not all of the features work. First, open the Phone app and navigate to the "Recents" tab. From here, tap the three-dot menu icon in the top search bar. Select "Call History" from the drop-down menu. Tap on a call from the list and more options will expand. Simply select "Block/Report Spam." A pop-up will appear. You can choose to also report the number as spam by checking the box before confirming that you'd like to block the phone number by tapping the "Block" button. That's all there is to it! Blocked numbers can be found in the Phone app's Settings under "Blocked Numbers." From there, you can unblock them. RELATED: How to Find Your Android Phone or iPhone with Google Assistant At this point students were ready to play. Overall the project went really well. Students had a reason to square a board and cut a block to specific dimensions. When playing, it was obvious to students that some blocks made the game less enjoyable due to their being out of spec and it allowed me to reiterate the importance of accuracy in our measurements and cuts. Surprisingly, a number of students wanted to keep their block. I thought that between the three sections of students that I would have enough blocks for two sets of games. However, I have just over enough 'in spec' blocks to play one game. Since this is a semester class, we will do this again next semester and pass along first semester's blocks to the elementary school across the street. Timing wise, the entire project took 8 class periods. Since students used each machine one at a time, under my supervision, it took some time to finish each step along the way. However, each student was also expected to take and pass a safety test on each piece of equipment. While waiting their turn for the next step, they worked on their safety test. I definitely plan to continue to use this project as an introduction to woodworking and the equipment in the shop. We have a recurring supply of used 2x4's from our construction class that would otherwise go to waste. This project re-purposes those 2x4's while also teaching students a number of pre-requisite skills. Definitely a win-win. Looking ahead to the future, we are hoping to get a laser engraver as well as some wood burners. Customizing their blocks would give students an opportunity to show some creativity as well as a chance to practice using two additional pieces of equipment. Enjoy! Blocking incoming calls isn't that difficult. It's an extension of caller ID, which displays the calling party's telephone number directly on your phone or on a device attached to your phone. You can read more about caller recognition in How does Caller ID work? Just as your fingerprint acts as a unique identifier, so does your phone number. Every time you place a phone call, the number you are calling from is transmitted along the phone line as a series of beeps at different frequencies. Even when your caller ID box reads "blocked," the number was still transmitted but was hidden from your view by the phone company at the caller's request. Many people subscribe to a service that prevents their number from displaying; you can also dial *67 to block your number from showing on certain calls. How Telephones Work will tell you all you want to know about sending information over phone lines. Without getting into all the technical details that it does, a phone call blocker works by recognizing those numbers that you've designated as prohibited, and instead of ringing your phone, it plays a message telling the person they've been blocked. Some phone call blockers can be programmed to reject calls from the last person who called. This way, even if you don't know the person's phone number you can still block unknown phone calls. With other screening devices, people with blocked numbers may be required to identify themselves if they want to reach you. Unfortunately, phone call blockers aren't foolproof. Persistent callers can often outwit these technologies. For example, phone spoofing, as it is sometimes called, alters the number that is transmitted as the call's origin so the caller won't be blocked. Placing a call with a calling card, using a pay phone or using VoIP can also evade blockers. If you receive threatening phone calls, you should contact the police. If you think about it, the prevalence of call screening devices is somewhat ironic. Telephones were invented to improve communication channels and enable people to connect to one another over long distances. Now there's a growing market for ways to shut down that channel and prevent people from connecting. What would Alexander Graham Bell think? Yes? Well read on, as I'm going to tell you how to end those annoying notifications once and for all! How To Block Facebook Game Invites On iPhones 1. Launch the Facebook application. 2. Hit the "More" button in the bottom right corner of the app. 3. Scroll to the bottom of the list and tap "Settings." 4. Hit "Notifications." 5. Under the section "How You Get Notifications," tap on "Mobile Push." 6. Uncheck the options that say "Application Requests" and "Application Invites. Voila! You'll no longer get those annoying requests. To make this process even easier, I'll provide a screenshot of the steps I just laid out above. If you want to get rid of other kinds of notifications (i.e., not just mobile ones), then return to step 5 of the above instructions. From there, go to "On Facebook" or "Email" instead of "Mobile Push" in order to restrict certain notifications you get on the non-mobile Facebook website and in your email inbox. If you just want to turn off individual apps that show up in your notifications box, the solution is quick and easy. Simply hover over the notification and click the "x." The following screenshot shows how to do that. That's it. With luck, you'll no longer be pestered by annoying invitations. Happy Facebooking! Share Pin it Tweet Share Email
